THAT a great name can be built on so slender a thing as a silk stocking seems scarcely believable. Yet wherever people who wear fine hosiery gather, you will find the name of Peck and Peck known to every mind—and known to every ankle.

There is hardly a haunt of fashion from Cairo to Coronado whose walks and whose ballrooms know them not and there is scarcely a golf club on whose fairways and greens Peck and Peck golf hose are not as familiar a sight as a bag of clubs.

But when Peck and Peck was first established over forty years ago, the idea of one shop wholly devoted to hosiery seemed daring and uncertain. Stockings then had not the charm that stockings have today.

For today, in place of plain and homely hose, Paris sends her choicest silken webs to us. Scotland yields its heathery hose of wool and American and English makers vie with each other and the world to make each new stocking more beautiful than the last.

But even forty years ago Peck and Peck—the new idea in shops—flourished, for though its stockings were simple and homely, there was never a question of quality and worth.

Today, in addition to hosiery you will find many other things—rare scarfs which twist in the autumn breeze and show a new color every time they turn, capes and sweaters and cravats of exclusive pattern and hosiery for men, for women and for children.

Today Peck and Peck is still conducted by its founders, it is run by the very same men who first made it a success.

And though their hosiery is sold only through the Peck and Peck shops today, it is admired all over the world.

A catalog of Peck and Peck offerings will be sent on request and mail orders will be promptly filled.
